CHRISTMAS CELEBRATIONS

EXERCISES OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS OF GETTYSBURG

Many Children Made Happy by Appropriate Programs and Distribution of Gifts.

Christmas morn was ushered in with an elaborate program at St. James Lutheran Church. At fifteen minutes before six o'clock a trombone quartet played in the church belfry.

At six o'clock the cantata, "Adoration," by George Nevin, was given in the church under the direction of Mrs. J. B. Baker to a large audience and was complete in every detail. Those who took part in it being appropriately gowned and presenting a very picturesque representation of the Christmas story.

The parts were represented as follows:

"Mary," by Miss Reba Miller.

"Angel of the Lord," by Mrs. Roy Zinn.

"Shepherds," Franklin Rudisill, and sons Stewart, Benton and Jacob, Jos. Sterner, Raymond Rudy, Calvin Hartman, Edgar Miller and John Blocher.

The Angel Chorus, sopranos, Helen Rupp, Hazel Thorn, Ivy Tawney, Grace Sachs, Marguerite Weaver, Sarah Reen; altos, Daisy Wentz, Pauline Rudisill, Nora Hartzell, Flo. Blocher, Grace Berger and Mary Shears.

In the scene at the manger, during song by Mrs. Zinn, five little girls, Ruth Stallsmith, Anna Oyler, Helen Pfeffer, Mazié Krout and Edna Zincand, accompanied with a lullaby motion.

St. James Sunday School exercises were held on Sunday evening and instead of the primary and adult schools having separate programs, as in former years, both schools united in presenting a very interesting entertainment, entitled "Gloria Excelsis."

The first part was made up of songs by the school.

The primary part was opened with a welcome by Clifford Bream.

SUDDEN DEATH VISITATIONSCUT DOWN WHILE HELPING AT BUTCHERING

Takes Her Own Life—Stricken While Going After the Cows—Found Dead in Bed

Mrs. ANNA POIST, wife of Philip Poist of Oxford township, near McSherrystown, fell over dead at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 21, from a stroke of apoplexy. She was aged 53 years 3 months and 2 days. Mrs. Poist was assisting Claude Keagy and family, near neighbors, to butcher on Wednesday, and had just completed the day's work and was ready to return to her home when she was stricken while walking out the yard. She fell to the ground, expiring instantly. The deceased was a daughter of the late Sebastian Weaver of McSherrystown, and was married 29 years ago to Philip Poist of Conewago township, who survives her, with seven sons and three daughters. The sons are: Charles Poist of Hanover, Joseph, Frank, Leo, Mark, Stanley and Pius at home; the daughters are Misses Mary and Anna, who reside at home, and Miss Sue Poist of McSherrystown. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. James Staub of Berlin Junction, and Mrs. Augustus Small of McSherrystown, and five brothers, John Weaver of Conewago township, Frank, Sebastian and Lewis Weaver of McSherrystown, and Charles Weaver of Albany, N.Y. Funeral took place Saturday, Dec. 24, at St. Mary's Catholic church, McSherrystown, where a solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. L. Aug. Reutter, interment in Conewago Chapel cemetery.

Mrs. CALIFORNIA A. WEAVER, aged 50 years, wife of John Weaver, optician and engraver, of Hagerstown, committed suicide last Wednesday morning at her home, by hanging herself with a rope made out of a blanket.

Justice Hartle, acting coroner, who went to the house and inquired into the facts, with Lieutenant Fridinger, decided an inquest was unnecessary.

A young daughter of Mrs. Weaver found the body hanging in the hallway on the first floor about 8 o'clock. Her body was still warm. It is thought she hanged herself soon after she arose from her bed.

Mrs. Weaver tied one end of the blanket rope to the bannisters and at the other end she made a loop through which she slipped her head. It is thought she stood on a box or trunk, adjusted the noose and then stepped off.

Her daughter cut the body down, using a pair of shears. She summoned her father, who used every means to revive his wife. He then went to police headquarters, accompanied by a friend, and reported the matter. Justice Hartle went to the house at once. He had Dr. E. A. Wareham summoned. The physician used every known method to revive the woman but was unsuccessful.

Mrs. Weaver, it is reported, on several previous occasions attempted to take her life. She had been closely watched. Mental derangement as result of illness is supposed to have been the cause of the act.

She was the youngest daughter of the late Burgess and Mrs. Edward Aughinbaugh of Chambersburg, and was born and raised there. Her husband is a native of Gettysburg and after their marriage he conducted a jewelry store in this place and the family lived at Chambersburg, Norfolk, Va., and Hagerstown, Md. Funeral was on Friday at Chambersburg. Surviving are her husband and three daughters, Misses Marie, Corinne and Leonilde. A brother and sister survive. James A. and Miss Mollie Aughinbaugh of Chambersburg.

GARRETT MYERS, a native, and for many years a resident of Adams Co., and a well-known citizen of Tipppecanoe County, Ind., was found dead in a field about forty rods from his home, two miles north of Petit, Ind., at about 5 o'clock Dec. 14. Mr. Myers left the house shortly after 4 o'clock to bring the cow. He was gone longer than usual and his wife called to him, but he did not respond. She then sent her son Calvin to look for him and he found him lifeless. Death is supposed to have resulted from heart failure. In the fall he received a slight abrasion over the left eye. Mr. Myers was born in Adams County, Oct. 25, 1823, and was the last of a family of five sisters and one brother, of the northern part of county. They were George, Mrs. Mary Chambers, Mrs. Margaret Bream, Mrs. Harriet Bream, Mrs. Susan Dull, and Mrs. Lizzie Parker. He went to Indiana in 1866 and was a well to do farmer. Mr. Myers was a member of the United Brethren Church. He was married sixty-one years ago to Miss Mary Staybaugh of near Center Mills, who with the following children survive: John H. Myers and Mrs. Levi Shively of Lafayette, William E. Myers of Monitors, Mrs. J. A. Sensenbaugh, Calvin A. and G. E. Myers, all of Tipppecanoe County, Ind. The funeral services were conducted at Zion United Brethren church Saturday morning, Dec. 17, at 10:30 o'clock.

Miss ESTER REBECCA HEINARD, an aged maiden lady who resided with her sister, Mrs. S. Retura Hersch, in Hampton, was found dead in bed by her sister at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning, Dec. 20, the cause of her death being pronounced heart failure. The lady had been in her usual health when she retired Monday evening, but when her sister went to her room at nine o'clock, found her dead. Miss Heinard, who was aged 73 years, was a daughter of the late Samuel and Anna Chromister Heinard. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Hersch, and one brother, Henry Heinard, both of York. The funeral took place from her late home last Saturday morning, services being held in the Reformed church, and interment made in Hampton Union cemetery.

ROBERT NEWTON ELLIOTT, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Elliott, of York, died Wednesday evening, Dec. 21, aged 2 months and 20 days. Buried Saturday morning at 10:30 at York.

When Sarah Went to School.

When Miss Elsie Singmaster's second book "When Sarah Went to School" was received from the publishers Houghton Mifflin Company of Boston several weeks ago and in acknowledging the receipt of book, the proposed charter is now on file in the Prothonotary's office.

Mrs. MICHAEL KORT who lived with her daughter, Mrs. Emory Miller, at W iota, died December 16, at the home of her son, Jacob, near Biglerville, from a stroke of paralysis. She was about 55 years old and for the past seven years had been almost helpless from a paralytic stroke. She was so weak that two weeks ago, when she made the trip to Biglerville she could not sit in the car seat and rode in the express car. Surviving are her husband and four children, Jacob of Biglerville, Mrs. Miller of W iota, Mrs. Tillman Young and a young son who is at home. Funeral on Sunday, December 18, Rev. Fred Geesey of Spring Grove officiating. Further services and interment followed at St. Peter's Lutheran Church at Lesches.

Mrs. EMMA MANN wife of Ernest Mann, died on Monday December 19, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Slaugenhaupt, at Littlestown, after a two months' illness. She was aged about 35 years. The deceased was married to Ernest Mann, son of Rev. Dr. Mann, formerly of Littlestown, and resided at Jersey City, N.J. Besides her husband and parents, she is survived by an infant son, Louis Albert, two months old. Three brothers also survive, Prof. Howard Slaugenhaupt of the faculty of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Norman of Trenton, N.J., and Raymond of Lancaster. Funeral was on Thursday, Dec. 22, services by Rev. Dr. Butz, of Redeemer's Reformed church officiating. Interment in Mt. Carmel cemetery, Littlestown.

Mrs. MARY ELLEN LEAS, wife of Wm. A. Leas, died last Thursday morning at her home near Bernudian, of typhoid pneumonia, aged 53 years, 1 month and 12 days. She is survived by her husband, a daughter Mrs. Elsie May, of Reading, one son Paul at home, also by two brothers, Wm. Lenhart of Illinois, J. Harry Lenhart of New York City. The funeral was Sunday morning with services at the Bernudian Reformed church, Rev. Wm. H. Miller officiating.

JAMES SLAGLE, proprietor of hotel at Emmitsburg, Md., died Monday, Dec. 19, from a complication of diseases. He was aged about 33 years. The deceased is survived by his wife, who was the widow of the late Lewis Mondorf, and one stepdaughter. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Slagle, of Emmitsburg, and three brothers, Robert Slagle of New York, John of Baltimore, and Joseph of McSherrystown.

GOTTLIEB FACKLER.—Dr. L. H. Fackler of York, formerly of East Berlin, received a telegram announcing the death of his uncle, Gottlieb Fackler, at Red Land, California. He was in his 85th year and was well known about East Berlin. Last summer he spent two months as the guest of Dr. Fackler and family and enjoyed his visit particularly. Sixty years ago he resided in York. At the time of his visit he was accompanied by his daughters, the Misses Mary and Ella Fackler, who, with a son at Cincinnati, survive.

That Washington Railroad.

The Baltimore American of recent date says that railroad men see in the construction of the Washington, Westmister and Gettysburg railway a freight cut off for the Pennsylvania, thus relieving the Baltimore tunnels of their congestion. The proposed road would connect with the Frederick division of the Pennsylvania Railroad by which a route would be open to York and thence to Philadelphia, and New York, as well as to Harrisburg and Western points.

Such a line it is contended would meet all the requirements of the freight cut off around Baltimore, which the Pennsylvania Railroad planned six years ago but was blocked by a denial of suburbs of Baltimore. The proposed road would meet all demands of the Pennsylvania for its constantly increasing Southern traffic and relieve the Baltimore tunnels, taxed now to their utmost. It is said that the volume and value of the traffic through the tunnels exceed those of any tunnels in the world.

It is only within the past few weeks that life has been infused into the Washington, Westmister and Gettysburg Railroad. A promise has been made by capitalists that with the grading of five miles of the proposed road funds will be forthcoming for its completion. The Columbia Construction Company, of Washington, of which E. Southard Parker is president, now has the enterprise in charge. It is claimed that the local traffic of the road will be sufficient for its support. It would only be necessary for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to guarantee interest on the bonds to insure the building of the road.

This point of view does not make hopeful of the road reaching Gettysburg.

EX-SENATOR CHARLES E. QUAHL, of Auburn, Schuylkill County, fell dead in the Auditor General's Department at Harrisburg last week. He was a physician and a veteran of the Civil War, having participated in the Gettysburg Campaign and was a member of the Battlefield Commission erecting the Pennsylvania Memorial dedicated last September.

RICHARD DAVIS about two weeks ago met with serious accident. He was an employ of the Shearer grain warehouse at Greason, Cumberland Co. He was going to the engine room to stop the engine, in order to remove a belt, and in passing another belt his glove was caught, and his arm drawn into it. His arm was so badly injured that it became necessary to amputate it, which was done at Harrisburg hospital. Blood poisoning set in and for some time Mr. Davis was very ill.

He suffered a relapse and last Friday passed away, gangrene being given as the cause of his death. He is survived by his aged father, J. N. Davis, his wife and three children, Marshall, May and Richard, one brother and two sisters, John, of Toolland, Mrs. Staybaugh, Greason and Mrs. Yeingst, of near Asper's this county.

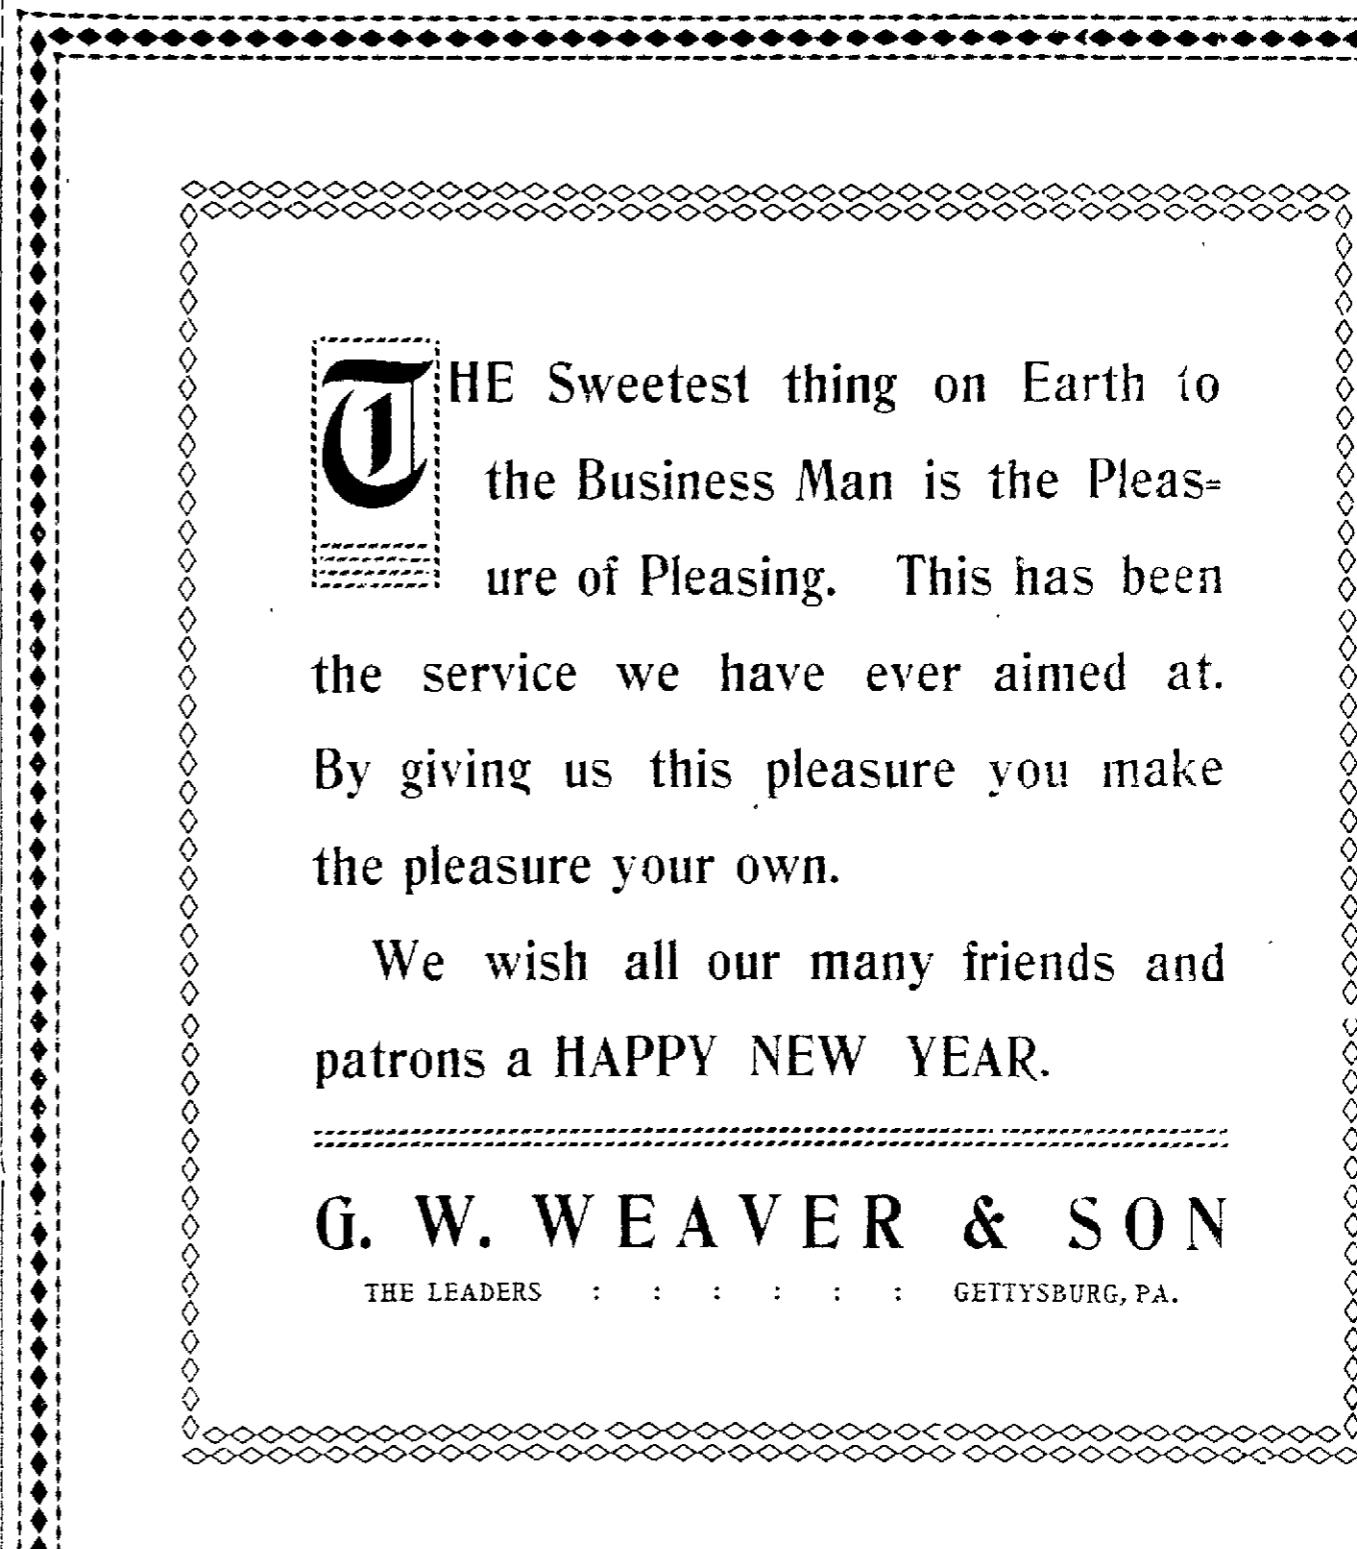

ROBERT NEWTON ELLIOTT, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Elliott, of York, died Wednesday evening, Dec. 21, aged 2 months and 20 days. Buried Saturday morning at 10:30 at York.

When Sarah Went to School.

When Miss Elsie Singmaster's second book "When Sarah Went to School" was received from the publishers Houghton Mifflin Company of Boston several weeks ago and in acknowledging the receipt of book, the proposed charter is now on file in the Prothonotary's office.

J. L. WILLIAMS, Solicitor.

"When Sarah Went to School" is a continuation of Miss Singmaster's first book "When Sarah Saved the Day" and is the story of the life of the little Pennsylvania German girl Sarah Weimer for several years beyond the point where the first book took her. It seemed to us that the second book is much stronger than the first. The Pennsylvania German atmosphere throughout is home made and possesses a naive charm that is most fascinating. There is no idiom to worry the reader only many instances of those typical expressions as illustrated in Sarah's dread of going away to school when she says she is "too dumb, nobody can't teach me nothing." The little Pennsylvania German lass is made the victim of jokes by the girls at the Normal to which Sarah goes and she begins her school life by losing her temper and throwing a pitcher of water over the transom of her room upon teacher thinking it was upon the girls who had been teasing her. The many difficulties she encounters and overcomes is most interestingly told. She begins to make good with her instructors and then with the other scholars and saves the day for her class in a thrilling way. Her aptitude for books is thoughtlessly imposed upon by her teachers and at the State Board examination she takes all the examinations for several classes because no one tells her what to do or what not to do and her work is done so well that she wins special recognition. The story from beginning to end is mellowed and softened to the Queen's taste with the Pennsylvania German, the atmosphere is harmonious and the book has an intensively homely charm characteristic of the subject. Miss Singmaster knows the heart and soul of the people she puts in her books and deserves great credit for the faithful preservation she is giving them in story. When the book is finished it is with a keen appetite to know more of Sarah and the hope is entertained that there will be other volumes to bring to maturity the life of this fascinating Pennsylvania German lass, Sarah Wenner.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

At the conclusion of one of the best years to the business interests of Gettysburg, with a year almost all to the good for the agricultural interests surrounding this town we say with this issue, "Good-bye" and facing the future we wish all our people a Happy, prosperous New Year. A Happy New Year that will be built upon the experience of the past. A Happy New Year that will be a reaping of the efforts toward better things that have been sowed.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

A number of candidates for the respective offices to be filled at the election next fall have asked us when the Compiler proposes to open its columns to political announcements. It seems somewhat far ahead with the primary five months off and the election ten months, but as the winter primary and spring election have been abolished and the only activity in the political world will be working toward the June primary. For these reasons and because the service of these columns of the Democratic paper is desired for the purpose, we announce that with our next issue, the first issue of the year 1911, political announcements will be inserted.

About every office in county, borough and township will be filled. Prothonotary, Sheriff, Clerk of the Courts, Register and Recorder, County Treasurer, County Commissioners, District Attorney, Director of the Poor, County Auditors, and Coroner.

Democratic candidates for any of the above offices should send in their announcements.

OUR ADVERTISERS

The proof that the advertisers of Gettysburg and Adams county appreciate the advertising medium of the columns of the GETTYSBURG COMPILER was shown in our holiday numbers. The Compiler has consistently and persistently served and exploited the town and county in which it is published and their business interests. We are devoted to making the Compiler representative of the community for which it stands. As a result we are proud of the record of over 1000 inches in our Christmas issues and that is 250 inches more home advertising than carried in any other paper in the county. When our esteemed contemporary the "Adams County Independent" boasts of 2000 inches of advertising in a single issue and it is found that but 750 inches were home advertising and 1250 of York county advertisers, the conclusion is forced that other communities are exploited at the expense of one's own town and county.

Contest for Office of Directors of Poor

H. W. Taylor of Butler township, in his petition for a quo warranto to test the title to the office of Director of the Poor set out in the papers he filed last week that Jacob E. Sharets has since the first Tuesday in December exercised and still does exercise the rights, franchises and privileges and emoluments of the office of Director of the Poor and of the House of Employment for the County of Adams without lawful authority.

That the said H. W. Taylor was duly elected at the general election in 1907 a Director of the Poor for a regular term which under the Act of March 24, 1817, establishing said office and regulating the same was for the term of three years from the first Tuesday of December, 1907.

That at the election in 1909 there was adopted by a vote of the people of the Commonwealth certain amendments to the Constitution and that by reason of said amendments and the schedule thereto, the term of office of H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor was extended for a period of one year. That there was created a system of biennial elections, one for the election of state officers and the other for the election of local officers, having for its purpose the complete separation of the election of the said state officers from that of the local officers.

That Jacob E. Sharets was a candidate before the people of Adams county for Director of the Poor at the general election held on November 8, 1910, claiming that the term of office of the said H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor expired the first Tuesday of December, 1910, and that a successor to him should be elected at the general election of 1910 and that Jacob S. Sharets received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate for the said office of Director of the Poor at the election held November 8, 1910, and was declared to be elected to the said office.

That by reason of the amendment to the Constitution the election held November 8th, 1910, was the biennial election for state officers alone and the term of H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor was extended for one year from the first Tuesday of December, 1910. That said office of Director of the Poor is not a state office but is a local or county office. That the election of Jacob E. Sharets to said office was therefore illegal and void. That the said H. W. Taylor being entitled to serve in said office and his term of office having extended is lawfully entitled to hold the office no withstanding which he said Jacob E. Sharets enjoys the office to the wrong and injury of the said H. W. Taylor.

Upon this application a rule was asked to show cause why a writ of quo warranto should not issue against Jacob E. Sharets to sow by what authority he claims to possess and exercise the office of Director of the Poor.

Answer of Jacob E. Sharets

Jacob E. Sharets answered the petition of H. W. Taylor by denying that the term of office of H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor was extended by the amendments to the constitution for one year from the first Tuesday of December, 1910 and that the election of Jacob E. Sharets was illegal and void. He denied that said H. W. Taylor was lawfully entitled to hold and exercise the said office. That he was duly elected a Director of the Poor in pursuance of Section 2 of the Act of March 24, 1817, to serve for three years.

That the said Act is entitled "An Act to provide for the erection of house for the employment and support of the poor of the county of Adams and provides and declares in Section

4 that the directors elected in the manner prescribed in said act shall forever thereafter in name and in fact be one body politic and corporate in law to all intents and purposes whatsoever relating to the poor of the said county of Adams and shall have perpetual succession and may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded by the name, style and title of "The Directors of the Poor and of the House of Employment for the County of Adams" and said directors shall be empowered to use a common seal in all business relating to the said corporation.

That the electors of Adams county have ever since the general election of 1817 in the manner prescribed by the Act elected Directors of the said body politic to serve for three years, one being elected annually. That the said Act of 1817 has never been revoked or repealed by the Constitution of Pennsylvania or by any amendment to the same or by any Act of the Assembly.

That Section 1 of Article XIV of the Constitution declares of what county offices shall consist and does not include Directors of the Poor but inten-tionaly excluded them and when the amendments were adopted in 1909 it was in the vewue of Article XIV.

There has been no amendment of Section 1 of Article XIV enumerating the county offices and when the amendments refer to county offices they refer necessarily to county offices as prescribed as such in Section 1 of Article

XIV and not to Directors of a body politic created by special and local

Act of Assembly.

The points raised by the application and answer are entirely legal and the contest will involve no disputed questions of fact. The legal question will be argued before Judge S. McC. Swope at an early date and will be for him to decide in the first instance. The decision of the Court of York county referred to in a previous issue sustains the position of Jacob E. Sharets and would give the office to him.

"The Climax."

"Have you seen 'The Climax'?"

"No." "Well, if you want to see the prettiest, cleanest and most natural play ever written you don't want to miss it."

This was the verdict of everyone who witnessed the production of the play during its long run at Weber's

Theatre, New York, and it is the verdict of the people wherever "The Cli-mакс" is presented. The company and production to be seen here is identically the same as when presented in

New York.

This play is unique in several respects. It has only three acts and four characters; the scene is the same throughout; and the interest depends wholly upon the story of the play itself. Anna Swinburne still plays the pretty singer, Adelina von Hagen.

Her voice is sweet and flexible, and her manner that of the bright unaffected, affectionate girl, whose musical proficiency in no way unites her for the humbler duties of home life.

While passing through the period of affliction that comes suddenly upon her, she proves her ability to rise

and despair are as intensely real as is her reaction of joy.

Howard Lanze makes an ideal Luigi

Colonni, the music teacher and adopt-ee of the heroine, and is by turns critical, impatient, sympathetic and absolutely lovable while Carney

Christie as Pietro Colontini is master in fine playing and his excellent portrayal of the character of the impulsive, loving boy, whose ambition is to write the "Song of the Soul," for Adelina's singing is at last gratific-

ing. William F. Fallon gives a finished and polished production of Doctor Raymond.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

At the conclusion of one of the best years to the business interest of Gettysburg, with a year almost all to the good for the agricultural interests surrounding this town we say with this issue, "Good-bye" and facing the future we wish all our people a Happy, prosperous New Year. A Happy New Year that will be built upon the experience of the past. A Happy New Year that will be a reaping of the efforts toward better things that have been sowed.

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENTS

A number of candidates for the respective offices to be filled at the election next fall have asked us when the COMPILER proposes to open its columns to political announcements. It seems somewhat far ahead with the primary five months off and the election ten months, but as the winter primary and spring election have been abolished and the only activity in the political world will be working toward the June primary. For these reasons and because the service of these columns of the Democratic paper is desired for the purpose, we announce that with our next issue, the first issue of the year 1911, political announcements will be inserted.

About every office in county, borough and township will be filled. Prothonotary, Sheriff, Clerk of the Courts, Register and Recorder, County Treasurer, County Commissioners, District Attorney, Director of the Poor, County Auditors, and Coroner.

Democratic candidates for any of the above offices should send in their announcements.

OUR ADVERTISERS

The proof that the advertisers of Gettysburg and Adams county appreciate the advertising medium of the columns of the GETTYSBURG COMPILER was shown in our holiday numbers. The COMPILER has consistently and persistently served and exploited the town and county in which it is published and their business interests. We are devoted to making the COMPILER representative of the community for which it stands. As result we are proud of the record of over 1000 inches in our Christmas issues and that is 250 inches more home advertising than carried in any other paper in the county. When our esteemed contemporary, the "Adams County Independent," boasts of 2000 inches of advertising in a single issue and it is found that but 750 inches were home advertising and 1250 of York county advertisers, the conclusion is forced that other communities are exploited at the expense of one's own town and county.

Contest for Office of Directors of Poor

H. W. Taylor of Butler township, in his petition for a quo warranto to test the title to the office of Director of the Poor set out in the papers he filed last week that Jacob E. Sharett has since the first Tuesday in December exercised and still does exercise the rights, franchises and privileges and emoluments of the office of Director of the Poor and of the House of Employment for the County of Adams without lawful authority.

That the said H. W. Taylor was duly elected at the general election in 1907 a Director of the Poor for a regular term which under the Act of March 24, 1817, establishing said office and regulating the same was for the term of three years from the first Tuesday of December, 1907.

That at the election in 1909 there was adopted by a vote of the people of the Commonwealth certain amendments to the Constitution and that by reason of said amendments and the schedule thereto, the term of office of H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor was extended for a period of one year. That there was created a system of biennial elections, one for the election of state officers and the other for the election of local officers, having for its purpose the complete separation of the election of the said state officers from that of the local officers.

That Jacob E. Sharett was a candidate before the people of Adams county for Director of the Poor at the general election held on November 8, 1910, claiming that the term of office of the said H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor expired the first Tuesday of December, 1910, and that a successor to him should be elected at the general election of 1910 and that Jacob E. Sharett received the highest number of votes cast for any candidate for the said office of Director of the Poor at the election held November 8, 1910, and was declared to be elected to the said office.

That by reason of the amendment to the Constitution the election held November 8th, 1910, was the biennial election for state officers alone and the term of H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor was extended for one year from the first Tuesday of December, 1910. That said office of Director of the Poor is not a state office but is a local or county office. That the election of Jacob E. Sharett to said office was therefore illegal and void. That the said H. W. Taylor being qualified to serve in said office and his term of office having extended is lawfully entitled to hold the office not withstanding which the said Jacob E. Sharett enjoys the office to the wrong and injury of the said H. W. Taylor.

Upon this application a rule was asked to show cause why a writ of quo warranto should not issue against Jacob E. Sharett to show by what authority he claims to possess and exercise the office of Director of the Poor.

Answer of Jacob E. Sharett

Jacob E. Sharett answered the petition of H. W. Taylor by denying that the term of office of H. W. Taylor as Director of the Poor was extended by the amendments to the constitution for one year from the first Tuesday of December, 1910 and that the election of Jacob E. Sharett was illegal and void. He denied that said H. W. Taylor was lawfully entitled to hold and exercise the said office. That he was duly elected a Director of the Poor in pursuance of Section 2 of the Act of March 24, 1817, to serve for three years.

That the said Act is entitled "An Act to provide for the erection of a house for the employment and support of the poor of the county of Adams and provides and declares in Section 4 that the directors elected in the manner prescribed in said act shall forever thereafter in name and in fact be one body politic and corporate in law to all intents and purposes whatsoever relating to the poor of the said county of Adams and shall have perpetual succession and may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded by the name, style and title of 'The Directors of the Poor and of the House of Employment for the County of Adams'" and said directors shall be empowered to use a common seal in all business relating to the said corporation.

That the electors of Adams county have ever since the general election of 1817 in the manner prescribed by the Act elected Directors of the said body politic to serve for three years, one being elected annually. That the said Act of 1817 has never been revoked or repealed by the Constitution of Pennsylvania or by any amendment to the same or by any Act of the Assembly.

That Section 1 of Article XIV of the Constitution declares of what county offices shall consist and does not include Directors of the Poor but intentionally excluded them and when the amendments were adopted in 1909 it was in the puer of Article XIV. There has been no amendment of Section 1 of Article XIV enumerating the county offices and when the amendments refer to county offices they refer necessarily to county offices as prescribed as such in Section 1 of Article XIV and not to Directors of a body politic created by special and local Act of Assembly.

The points raised by the application and answer are entirely legal and the contest will involve no disputed questions of fact. The legal question will be argued before Judge S. McC. Swope at an early date and will be for him to decide in the first instance. The decision of the Court of York county referred to in a previous issue sustains the position of Jacob E. Sharett and would give the office to him.

While passing through the period of affliction that comes suddenly upon her, she proves her ability to rise above the commonplace, and her grief and despair are as intensely real as is her reaction of joy.

Howard Lange makes an ideal Luigi Gofani, the music teacher and adoptive uncle of the heroine, and is by turns, critical, impatient, sympathetic and altogether lovable while Carney Christie as Pietro Gofani is masterful, his fine playing and his excellent portrayal of the character of the imaginative, loving boy, whose ambition to write the "Song of the Soul" for Adelina's singing is at last gratified and then as E. Fallon gives a finished interpretation of Doctor Raymond.

The play abounds in touches of humor as well as pathos and the spectator almost feels that he is looking on scenes drawn from real life. "The Climax" will be the attraction at the Waters' Theatre Friday evening, December 29, 1910.

Don't miss "The Climax."

Henrietta Fickes' Will Contested

Proceedings to contest the will of Henrietta M. Fickes, late of Straban township, were begun in the common pleas court at York last week. The contestants are the three brothers of the deceased: Himes G. Fickes, of Warrensburg, Ill., Howard G. Fickes of Owen, Wis., and Luther T. Fickes of Sterling, Col. Miss Fickes died Nov. 5, 1909, and on the 10th of that month a paper purporting to be her will was admitted to probate and letters testamentary on it were granted to Mrs. Hattie M. Anstadt, of York. In the petition filed in court it is claimed that "at the time of the alleged execution of the said paper writing, said Henrietta M. Fickes was not of sound disposing mind, memory or understanding, or capable of making a valid will; and said writing was procured by undue influence exercised by Hattie M. Anstadt and others to induce her to make said instrument." Judge Bittinger granted a rule on Mrs. Anstadt to show cause why a jury trial should not be awarded to determine the validity of the will. According to the inventory filed in the register of wills' office, Miss Fickes died leaving personal property worth $4,484.99 but the sale thereof increased the proceeds to $5,027.16. This consisted principally of stock and certificates of deposit in the Farmers & Merchants Bank, of New Oxford. The expenses of settlement and debts of the decedent reduced the estate to $8,094.33, which balance under the terms of the will, is bequeathed to Mrs. Anstadt. Miss Fickes had lived in Straban township for many years and about a year before her death sold her real estate in that township and moved to York.

Kicked on Head by Horse

Jumping from a team during a runaway in York, Charles Brown of East Berlin was kicked in the head by a horse, sustaining a laceration of the forehead. The wound which was four inches in length required several stitches to close. The accident occurred near a W. M. R. R. crossing as Brown accompanied by Samuel Baugher were returning home. The horses became frightened at a shifting engine, reared and unhooked the traces. The animals dragging the wagon by the Yoke, turned and ran east. Brown jumped from the wagon and falling forward was struck on the forehead by one of the horses heels. Finally the team swerved to the sidewalk, where the horses became entangled in a tree and were secured. Mr. Baugher, who remained in the wagon, was uninjured.

Feed the Quail.

State Game Commissioner Joseph Kalbfus is out with an appeal to the sportsmen and the farmers to feed the quail. "Winter has come earlier than usual and there are heavy snows reported in many counties. This means that the means of livelihood for the quail are to be restricted for a longer period than usual."

"If we have a rigorous winter it may wipe out the little game birds in many sections of the State and I hope the sportsmen and lovers of hunting will do what they can to feed the birds. Thanks to the intelligent propagation of quail the last few years we have had bird seasons which have been joys to many hunters. Now let the hunters turn in and arrange means whereby food can be put where quail abound. The quail do not go off into the impenetrable parts of the State. They are right among us. Why last year they were found in sight of the State Capitol and within three miles of Pittsburgh's city hall. The same might be said of other cities. The example of some men I know might be followed with profit. Up in Lewisburg I know a man who twice a week takes feed out where quail can get it. He's a bird lover, no more."

"The farmers ought to do more to keep quail alive. The farmer gets more benefit than any one else because the quail eat up insects which if unchecked by bird life would ruin his crops before he could get ready to fight them. Let the farmers look after 'Bob White,' too. Screenings, wheat with cockle in it, buckwheat, any kind of grain will do and the farmers' boys can haul it where the quail will get it. If the people feed the quail this winter, and its promises to be hard we will have fine hunting again in the fall."

A number of Adams County farmers soon after the first snow began the feeding of quail on their farms.

New Pension Bill Up in Congress.

Every veteran in Adams county will be interested in the Solloway Bill reported favorable by the Committee on Invalid Pensions of the House and very likely to become a law at the present session of Congress. The report of the committee is as follows:

This bill, if enacted into law, will grant to all persons who served 90 days or over in the Civil War, or 60 days or over in the Mexican War, and who have reached the age of 62 years, a pension of $15 per month; this is $3 per month more than is now allowed under the act of February 6, 1907, 62 years, $20 per month. This is a new rating. Under the existing act, there is no rating between the ages of 62 and 70 years, and your committee thinks this is unjust to the soldier.

It is the opinion of the committee that in his declining years, with a majority of the veterans partially or wholly unfit to perform manual labor, there should be an increase allowed at the age of 65 years, hence the recommended expenditure of a new rate of $1 per month; 70 years, $25 per month; this is an increase of $10 per month over the existing rates; 75 years of age, $36 per month; being an increase of $18 per month over the amount now allowed under the maximum rate of the age act.

There is a bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Smith of Pennsylvania, which would increase the pension to $25 per month for all veterans over 65 years of age.

It is the opinion of the committee that the pension should be increased to $25 per month for all veterans over 65 years of age.

With old age and its attendant infirmities creeps upon the survivors of both the Civil and Mexican Wars, there is not a member of either branch of Congress who is not besieged with hundreds of the most deserving and pitiable cases where the beneficiary is pleading for relief by special act, there being no existing law to cover these distressing cases. The pension of Congress, working by night and day have been able to bring relief to a few thousand soldiers, yet in comparison with the thousands who are still knocking at its doors for help, it is but a drop in the bucket. In this Congress alone there has been referred to the two pension committees of the House of Representatives, more than 20,000 bills for private pensions. Among this vast number are thousands of blind, paralyzed, bedridden, and pain-racked soldiers, with long and honorable records whose cases can never be reached under the present system, and who will be obliged to pass their last days in misery and want.Your committee feels that the time*has come when there should be some-*thing done to relieve the pension com-*mmittees of Congress from the tremen-*dous amount of work that confronts*them: that instead of taking up the*few cases that the committees can*possibly consider, all soldiers should*be put upon an equal footing, and in*their few remaining years equal insi-*gencies should be meted out to all. CUPID'S PIPES

By MARION DEXTER

Copyrighted, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.

Jan Vanderstreet was without doubt and by unanimous consent, especially his own, the leading citizen of the little painted village of Dykheld.

Therefore when he imparted to his fellow citizens the information that he had bought a large tract of land in America, where fortunes were to be made in an incredible hurry, half a hundred very substantial and phlegmatic Hollanders marshaled their families after grave deliberation and embarked with him, after selling their queer little painted houses and tulip gardens and cows with true Dutch thrift.

Jan Vanderstreet took with him his wonderful collection of pipes, famed throughout all Gelderland and even beyond that beautiful district. He also took with him what he valued almost as much as his pipes—his very buxom and still blooming wife, his blooming daughter, Ankle, and his blooming orphaned niece, Johanna de Koop.

The only member of the party of Holland adventurers who was not truly substantial, according to sound Dutch standards, was Dirk Van Pelt. Myrtille Vanderstreet had frowned on his admission as a member of the solemn exodus. But Dirk had cunningly used such un-Hollandlike haste in putting his entire patrimony of $1,000 into the speculation that he had an interest in it before the more deliberate mynheer knew it.

Jan Vanderstreet did not like this at all. The trouble was that Dirk was altogether too fond of Ankle. If the broad shouldered, sturdy, handsome youth had only exhibited enough sense to be fond of some one not in the Vanderstreet family the mynheer might have felt quite glad to have him in the party. For Dirk was not at all disagreeable to anybody, with his kind smile and his readiness to help every one who needed it.

Mynheer Vanderstreet determined to keep close watch during the voyage. But what could one do on shipboard?

Could a worthy Dutchman of five and sixty be expected to go on guard over his daughter when all the men folks were smoking their pipes on deck telling tales of the past and speculating about the future? Truly not.

The chaperonage of Ankle was therefore left to her mother. But even on shipboard that industrious Dutch housewife could not be idle, and when one has a huge stocking and a ball of yarn, also a set of knitting needles, it is not always convenient to follow a will-o'-the-wisp of a girl.

Besides, Johanna was always with her cousin, and loremaking when a third person is present is not so easy to carry on. At least so argued Mistress Vanderstreet, forgetting that there is a language of the eye which expresses as clearly as speech what is in one's heart and that a pressure of the hand may convey an assurance of love just as plainly as if one said aloud, "I love you."

Although Dirk had little opportunity of telling Ankle of his love by word of mouth, that he was her devoted slave and wished for no greater happiness than to call her his wife, Ankle knew what was in his heart, because she returned his love.

By the end of the voyage Dirk knew that her heart was in his keeping, and he determined to wrest from the soil of the prairie a living that would entitle him to old Vanderstreet's respect.

Busy days followed the arrival of the Hollanders in the little Iowa settlement. Ground was broken, teams purchased, grain sowed and houses erected.

The Vanderstreet residence was the most pretentious in the place, but the cottage built by Dirk Van Pelt was as pretentious as any little Dutch home as any romantic girl would wish.

Vines were planted and soon grew about the porch, a bed of tulips flaunted gayly colored blossoms in the front yard, and a kitchen garden flourished in the rear.

Things soon prospered with Dirk and after six months of anxious waiting he ventured to call on Jan Vanderstreet to ask for the hand of his daughter. The mynheer, with unusual promptness, immediately gave Dirk to understand that he wished to hear no more of the matter and very politely intimated that the doors of the Vanderstreet residence would be closed thenceforth to him.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, Dirk went slowly home, vowing to himself with genuine Holland determination that he would never give up the girl he loved.

His resolution was strengthened by the sight of Ankle standing at the window holding out a letter, which she dropped and he picked up.

The letter told him that she would be his with or without her father's blessing, and bade him have patience.

Dirk continued to work his little place industriously, hoping to bear from Ankle. But three weeks elapsed before he had an opportunity of talking with her. He left her presence, feeling much encouraged, and fell asleep that night more hopeful. He was awakened from sweet dreams of his love by the cry of fire.

Throwing on his clothes, he rushed from the house. The town was already aroused, and down the streets the people came running in all stages of dress, the clatter of their wooden shoes making as much noise as the modern fire engine.

"It is Jan Vanderstreet's!" some one screamed. "The place is doomed!"

On hearing these words Dirk ran faster than before and outstripped the crowd. When he reached the house he found the family coming out laden with plunder, and heard Mistress Vanderstreet exclaim: "No more must we go back! It is not safe, and it is better to lose one's goods than one's life."

"But my pipes! My precious pipes!" cried old Jan, all his phlegmatic restfulness gone. "I must get them!"

His wife seized him firmly by the arm.

"That you shall not do. Everything is afire. I will not let you risk your life for a set of worthless pipes."

"Worthless pipes!" thundered Jan.

"How dare you speak so? They are a part of my life. I have been collecting them all my life long, until now more than a hundred hang in my rack. And must I lose them all because of your hard headedness? Let me go. I say; let me go!"

He struggled wildly in her grasp, but it was in vain. Mistress Vanderstreet was a very strong and a nobly determined woman and held him in so firm a grip he could do naught but writh and groan.

Dirk Van Pelt had a great emotion and reached a great determination with an almost American swiftness. He knew that the rafters of the blazing house would fall in soon—might tumble in crimson ruin at any moment. But not in vain did he have in his veins the blood of the wonderful race that cut the dikes and drowned their beloved land rather than yield it to the invaders.

He went to a tank of water and wet his coat. Throwing it over his head, he plunged into the burning house, not heeding the shrill cry of distress which issued from the lips of the trembling Ankle.

Five minutes of dreadful suspense followed, during which the rafters fell in and sent the sparks flying upward in a mad shower. Surely no one could live in such a place. Ankle, moaning pitifully, sank to the ground, heedless of the crowd of spectators and burst out into wild weeping.

Suddenly a shout of joy arrested her attention, and, stirring up, she saw through a mist of tears the form of Dirk issuing from the burning house. He staggered like a drunken man under the weight of a huge rack which held the precious pipes, not one of which was missing.

Straight to the man who had refused him his daughter's hand stumbled Dirk Van Pelt. Then as old Jan took the burden from him the young man fell senseless at his feet.

When he opened his eyes, Jan Vanderstreet was standing by him, tears streaming down his cheeks. He took Dirk's hand, saying brokenly: "A house one can soon acquire, but such a treasure of pipes—as that takes a lifetime to acquire. Such a deed as yours, Dirk, is worthy of any reward.

Raising himself on his elbow, Dirk summoned Ankle, who was hovering near. Then, with a determined glance, he signified to her farber what reward he wished.

"So," said Jan slowly, "you still want Ankle? I have already told you she was not for you, but—take her, Dirk Van Pelt. She is yours. Ah, what a collection of pipes! What coloring! What noble bowls and what grand stems!"

"Ankle is worth all the pipes that ever were made or ever will be made," protested the happy lover, holding her tightly in his own and gazing adoringly into her tender blue eyes.

"Perhaps so, perhaps so," muttered Jan absently, "but such pipes as mine—" He turned and summoned a man to help him carry the rack of matchless pipes to a place of safety and left the lovers still looking happily into each other's eyes.

CUPID'S PIPES

By MARION DEXTER

[Copyrighted, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.]

Jan Vanderstreet was without doubt and by unanimous consent, especially his own, the leading citizen of the little painted village of Dykheld.

Therefore when he imparted to his fellow citizens the information that he had bought a large tract of land in America, where fortunes were to be made in an incredible hurry, half a hundred very substantial and plodding Hollander marshaled their families after grave deliberation and embarked with him, after selling their queer little painted houses and tulip gardens and cows with true Dutch thrift.

Jan Vanderstreet took with him his wonderful collection of pipes, famed throughout all Gelderland and even beyond that beautiful district. He also took with him what he valued almost as much as his pipes—his very buxom and still blooming wife, his blooming daughter, Ankie, and his blooming orphaned niece, Johanna de Koop.

The only member of the party of Holland adventurers who was not truly substantial, according to sound Dutch standards, was Dirk Van Pelt. Myneher Vanderstreet had frowned on his admission as a member of the solemn exodus. But Dirk had cunningly used such un-Hollandlike baste in putting his entire patrimony of $1,000 into the speculation that he had an interest in it before the more deliberate mynheer knew it.

Jan Vanderstreet did not like this at all. The trouble was that Dirk was altogether too fond of Ankie. If the broad shouldered, sturdy, handsome youth had only exhibited enough sense to be fond of some one not in the Vanderstreet family the mynheer might have felt quite glad to have him in the party, for Dirk was not at all disagreeable to anybody, with his kind smile and his readiness to help every one who needed it.

Truly not.

The chaperonage of Ankie was therefore left to her mother. But even on shipboard that industrious Dutch housewife could not be idle, and when one has a huge stocking and a ball of yarn, also a set of knitting needles, it is hard to be always convenient to follow a will-o'-the-wisp of a girl.

RETURN OF PLAID.

Resumes Its Position as Favorite For Children's Dresses.

By Far the Most Economical Material For General Wear, as It Is Strong and Does Not Show Stains.

The old favorite plaid is again here. It has one reliable point in the popularity accorded to different fabrics—after short rests this satisfactory material bows up serenely and successfully takes its wearer through a season.

The covered surface is dirt defying; it is effectively albed with plain mat-terials in a dress, and it gives a smart trimming for velvet, cloth or silk. For little girls, plaid is always good style. When trimmed with plain collar and cuffs or with one-toned bands of contrasting color it can be made distinctive and modish. In Paris some of the finest coats and dresses are exploited in paid by the leading houses that make children's garments.

Among the styles on this line frequently seen are brown plaid coats. The texture is usually rough, with a stripe of blue. A deep collar, forming a hood at the back, is of plain blue serge. A silk tassel hangs from the hood, and the coat fastens in front with one large bone button.

Another idea, suitable for a girl from fourteen to twenty years old, is a suit of plain blue serge trimmed with blue and green plaid. This forms a deep sailor collar and supple revers edged with a band. Turned back cuffs and a broad band on the skirt are used to complete the idea of the touch of plaid. Here is a practical idea of trimming last year's suit. Purchase a remnant of plaid and use as suggested. The entire appearance can be altered by the introduction of this favorite material.

Browns and greens form the smaller plaid for the young girl in the military suit which is here illustrated. The jacket buttons at the side under braid ornaments and by hooks and eyes under the flap at the top. This braided effect is repeated on the skirt. A small collar and straight cuffs are of plain brown cloth. With this is worn a military hat of velvet, turned up in three sections and ornamented with a plaited fan of gold tissue.

A last suggestion is a combination of two remnants, which always hold a message of hope for home dressmakers. Scotch plaid is used with a band of plain blue on the lower part of the skirt and outlining the yoke and sleeves. The jacket worn with this one piece frock is of plain dark blue serge trimmed with a plain collar and an insertion of plaid on the outer edge of each cuff. The jacket is short, the revers large, and the whole costume gives an effect of a tailored suit, but it can be made at home.

Paris sends these plaid suggestions to America with her sanction. It is for you to follow along the many colored way—just for a reliable and becoming chance.

RETURN OF PLAID.

Resumes Its Position as Favorite For Children's Dresses.

By Far the Most Economical Material For General Wear, as It Is Strong and Does Not Show Stains.

The old favorite plaid is again here. It has one reliable point in the popularity accorded to different fabrics—after short rests this satisfactory material bobs up squarely and successfully takes its wearer through a season.

The covered surface is dirt defying. It is effectively allied with plain materials in a dress, and it gives a smart trimming for velvet, cloth or silk. For little girls' plaid is always good style. When trimmed with plain collar and cuffs or with one-toned bands of contrasting color it can be made distinctive and modish. In Paris some of the finest coats and dresses are exploited in paid by the leading houses that make children's garments.

Among the styles on this line frequently seen are brown plaid coats. The texture is usually rough, with a stripe of blue. A deep collar, forming a hood at the back, is of plain blue serge. A silk tassel hangs from the hood, and the coat fastens in front with one large bone button.

Another idea, suitable for a girl from fourteen to twenty years old, is a suit of plain blue serge trimmed with blue and green plaid. This forms a deep sailor collar and supple revers edged with a band. Turned back cuffs and a broad band on the skirt are used to complete the idea of the touch of plaid. Here is a practical idea of trimming last year's suit. Purchase a remnant of plaid and use as suggested. The entire appearance can be altered by the introduction of this favorite material.

Browns and greens form the smaller plaid for the young girl in the military suit, which is here illustrated. The jacket buttons at the side under braid ornaments and by hooks and eyes under the flap at the top. This braided effect is repeated on the skirt. A small collar and straight cuffs are of plain brown cloth. With this is worn a military hat of velvet turned up in three sections and ornamented with a plaited fan of gold tissue.

A last suggestion is a combination of two remnants, which always hold a message of hope for home dressmakers. Scotch plaid is used with a band of plain blue on the lower part of the skirt and outlining the yoke and sleeves. The jacket worn with this one piece frock is of plain dark blue serge trimmed with a plain collar and with an insertion of plaid on the outer edge of each cuff. The jacket is short, the revers large, and the whole costume gives an effect of a tailored suit, but it can be made at home.

Paris sends these plaid suggestions to America with her sanction. It is for you to follow along the many colored way—just for a respite and becoming change.

IN HONOR OF GEO. G. MEADEA DINNER GIVEN TO RENEW INTEREST IN A PENNSYLVANIAN*Whose Greatest Service was in the Winning of the battle of Gettysburg.

On Saturday of this week a dinner in commemoration of the 85th anniversary of the birth of General George Meade will be given by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania.

It is rather unusual to celebrate the 85th anniversary of a departed hero, but the real significance of this celebration lies in the fact that it is not because December 31 this year is the 85th anniversary of General Meade's birth, but by means of this dinner, at which there will be at least three lieutenant generals of the United States present, and possibly a fourth, it is hoped to call attention to the service of the great Pennsylvania soldier, and it is also hoped to make the anniversary one of those to be remembered in the same manner each year hereafter.

Ex-Governor Pennypacker, who is president of the Historical Society, is largely responsible for the idea. It may be said that it is only another instance of his campaign to do justice to the great Pennsylvanians, who are least known and least regarded in their own State. In his recent book composed of various essays on Pennsylvanians and Pennsylvanians, Governor Pennypacker may be said to have fairly started his campaign of honoring the prophets in their own country. The novelty of this recognition did not impress him nearly so much as the entire justice of it did. Those who have taken the pains to make the necessary research know that Pennsylvania and Virginia have furnished more great soldiers to this country than any other two States in the Union. It is true that the majority of the Virginia heroes are very well known, but, as Governor Pennypacker has pointed out, the Pennsylvanians and their deeds are unfamiliar to even the educated Pennsylvanian.

Three Generals to Attend.

Speaking of the careless way fame has been awarded to Pennsylvania soldiers, the great military leaders of the past, Governor Pennypacker remarked the other day: "After Jacob Brown won the war of 1812 we ran shouting for Andrew Jackson, who won one fight, that of New Orleans, after the war was over. But Brown was a Pennsylvanian, so we dropped him."

The Hon. Charlemagne Tower is the chairman of the committee in charge of the celebration, and Colonel William Brooke Rawle, who was at Gettysburg, is taking every interest in the celebration in the effort to make it a success.

Three lieutenants generals of the United States have sent in acceptances to the dinner—Nelson A. Miles, John C. Bates and Samuel B. M. Young, and it is still expected that General Adna B. Chaffee may be present. Even with three lieutenant generals at the board, it is said that such a combination never before has occurred.

As one of his own soldiers said, a man in the ranks, "General Meade was no hurrash soldier," and it is probably due to his notion that he who deserves fame should have it awarded him without being under the necessity of calling attention to his own merits, that Meade's fame is not so widely spread as it should in justice be. This pose of Meade, which is said to have been due to his strict ideas of justice and even to a little of his patrician-like pride, seems to have caused even Grant, who openly said he esteemed him above any of his generals, to appoint Sheridan his junior, to the grade of lieutenant general of the army. This was a severe blow to General Meade, and, indeed, he did not long survive what he regarded as an injustice.

Meade's Ancestry.

George Gordon Meade, the greatest soldier produced by Pennsylvania, while he should be regarded as a Philadelphian, really was born in Cadiz, Spain, and did not come to this country until he was five years of age. He came of a family of merchants, who long were prominent in Philadelphia's commerce, and that, subsequent to his father's death, was forced to make his way in the world, was due to another injustice which he suffered at the hands of that Government of which later in life he was the instrument by which it was saved. While his grandfather, George Meade, was a wealthy merchant, who had his ships upon the seas, to all parts of the world, and while his father also was a successful merchant, the latter, while residing in Spain, part of the time as an agent of the United States, had a claim for supplies, which, when the United States purchased Florida from Spain, was transferred to this country. Up to the present time the claim, which the United States assumed and acknowledged, never has been paid to the Meade family, and, as nearly 100 years have elapsed, the amount now due, probably would be a fortune.

General Meade's father, Richard Worms Meade, married Margaret Coates Butler, of Perth, Amboy, N.J. At the age of 25 the father had achieved a competence in trade with the West Indies, and his home was the centre of luxury and social attractions. It was into this atmosphere that the future victor of Gettysburg was born. It is true that the home of his father then, December 31, 1815, was in Cadiz, and it is equally true that in spite of his claim on the Spanish government the father was a well-to-do man.

A Cadet at West Point
General Meade was only 18 when his father died, and although he had desired to go to college and become a lawyer, he was, in 1831, when he was 16, appointed to a cadetship to West Point Military Academy, and, as it would appear, against his will he was made a soldier. It would almost seem that destiny had provided for him, as if Gettysburg even then had been foreseen, and that the man who was to achieve its victory, regarded as the greatest ever achieved by force of arms in this country, and by some observers doubted if it has its equal in the history of any other country.

At the military academy young Meade in no way outshone others of his companions, who are unknown now, and in his class he stood number 18 in a class of 56. On his last year, of the entire roll of 240 cadets, Meade stood 210 in general conduct. He had 188 demerit marks and needed 83 more to have caused his discharge. Yet of all the members of the class with which he graduated, in 1835, he alone was to arise to great distinction.

His first assignment after his graduation was as brevet second lieutenant in the Third Artillery. He had a three-months' leave of absence to assist on the survey of the Long Island Railroad. He had a few other assignments, and, in 1837, the War Department selected him to make a survey of the boundary line between the United States and Texas.

In 1840 he became assistant to the commission to establish the boundary line between the two countries, and later, in the same year, he was appointed by the Secretary of War civil assistant on the survey of the northwestern boundary between this country and British territory.

It was in this year that young Meade married Miss Margaretta Sergeant, daughter of John Sergeant, one of the leaders of the Philadelphia bar, and one of the leaders of the Whig party in Pennsylvania.

During the Mexican War Lieutenant Meade successively served as topographic engineer on the staffs of General Taylor and General Scott. Returning from the war, he was promoted to be a first lieutenant, and soon after to a captaincy. For a while he was engaged in erecting light-houses for the Government, and part of the work on the Delaware Breakwater was done under the direction of Captain Meade. Later, he was sent on the geodetic survey of the Great Lakes, by the then Secretary of War, Jefferson Davis.

Outbreak of Civil War.

Meade was in the West when the Civil War broke out, and when Governor Curtin called for volunteers Meade hastened home, and in August, 1861, was commissioned Brigadier General of Volunteers. At first General Meade was in command of the Second Brigade of the Pennsylvania Reserves.

To follow him through the campaigns in the South and West, and to follow him as leader now of a brigade, then in a short time to be placed at the head of a division; then, by another turn of Fortune's wheel, to be made chief of corps, only to once again be placed in charge of a division, would require, as it has, the capacity of a book. It may be sufficient for the purpose here to recall that he was in some of the most momentous campaigns in which the Army of the Potomac was concerned, the army which for two years he was to have sole command, a longer period than had been the fortune of any other soldier to command it. The battlefields of South Mountain, of Antietam, of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville saw the gallant Pennsylvania soldier; but, notwithstanding his immense and continuous services, in the course of which he was wounded by a spent grapeshot, at Antietam, where his famed warhorse, Baldy, also was wounded, it is Meade at Gettysburg that attracts the attention.

Meade at Gettysburg.

Yet even at Gettysburg Meade was not the figure of a soldier that attracts the vulgar attention. It has been said of him that he was "master of logistics," he was the mathematician who had an exact knowledge of how to move immense armies; he had an almost intuitive power in matters of topography, and it is said of him that he was able to wake in the night at the sound of heavy firing and tell just what troops were engaged on the Union side, and also to know without looking at his maps, just where they were located. It is said also of his immense power in the field of military science that he knew the position of yesterday, today and tomorrow, without looking over his maps. In these matters he seemed to have almost clairvoyant powers. Of course there was nothing back of them but sheer knowledge, and knowledge acquired by experience.

The battle of Gettysburg, the most decisive campaign of the whole war, was so complicated that it would require a treatise alone to give the merest outline of what took place there. At Gettysburg, however, Meade was in command of the Union forces, and he had under his control the largest body that ever confronted Lee. The titanic struggle lasted during the first three days of July, 1863, and ended by the complete defeat of the Southern leader.

In the masterly manner in which he handled the complicated situation he found at Gettysburg, Meade astonished the military men of the world. He was given credit for his genius in Europe before it was awarded to him at home. He had encountered superior numbers, he had faced the greatest soldier the South had, and one who was held in high regard for his military genius both North and South, and he had defeated them. He had rolled back the tide from the North, and, virtually, he had decided the struggle, although it was finally decided only 18 months later.

Meade's work was not done when he addressed his army on July 4, 1863, and notified them of their victory. He was to take the Army of the Potomac across the Rapidan, he was to fight the enemy at Spottsylvania, and he was to encounter him at Cold Harbor, and he was to be an active figure in the last campaign against Richmond.

His Later Years.

At the close of the war General Meade was made a brigadier general in the regular establishment, and given command of the Military Division of the Atlantic, with headquarters at Philadelphia. Subsequently he was to be placed in command of the Department of the South, and was to take a hand in reconstruction.

In 1865 Harvard made General Meade a doctor of laws. In 1869 President Grant advanced General Sheridan, his junior, to the office of Lieutenant general, and General Meade regarded this as a blow, for he had reason to expect to be advanced to the office himself. He died November 6, 1872, in Fairmount Park, which he had as an engineer planned, there was erected a spirited equestrian statue of him a few years ago.

Few of the generals in the Union Army attracted so much attention from military experts as did General Meade. Even General Grant who, as has been told, promoted his junior above him, spoke of Meade as a general whom he esteemed highly, and "second only to Sherman."

General Grant added that but for his quick temper he would have had no superior. "But," he continued, "with a quick temper goes his quick perception of what is required on the field of battle and makes his judgment so unexceptional. He seldom makes mistakes."

When Meade's death was announced to Grant, while the latter was President, he turned to Admiral Porter, who was standing beside him, and remarked, "This is sad news, but what a calamity it would have been had it occurred during the war!" From Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Her Name Was Louise.

There was a young girl named Louise, and she looks just as light as a breeze, with waist very slim, and a figure quite trim, just the sort of a girl you could squeeze. Now Louise had a passion for art, though the boys say she hasn't a heart, but her home it looks fine, and her smile is divine, and Chi-Namel she used from the start. Most beautiful and artistic effects are produced by the amateur after five minutes' practice with the Chi-Namel Ready-to-Use Training Process—gives the hard wood effect to old shabby woodwork at a cost of only 2c per sq. ft. Let us tell you more about it at our store. Sold by J. H. Colliflower.

Two Fires

The buildings on farm of E. T. Bream, near York Springs, were saved with difficulty last week from destruction by fire. They had been butchering and a shovel of ashes had been brought out to place in the steaming barrel, and a spark flew into an adjacent straw stack and in a moment it was on fire. It took an hour's work to put out fire and only a small load was saved from stack.

The ice house of T. E. Warner, at Diehl's Mill, at edge of New Oxford, was destroyed by fire last week. Men had been engaged during the day storing ice and engine became disabled, and fire was withdrawn and men went home and it is thought fire from engine may have caused the blaze. The loss was about $400. Mr. Warner is rebuilding.

THE ONLY WAY

Many Gettysburg Citizens Have Discovered It.

Just what to do when the kidneys are affected, is a question that concerns both young and old. Weak kidneys neglected in childhood lead to life-long suffering. People of advanced years, with less vitality, suffer doubly. In youth or age, languor, backache, urinary irregularity, dizziness and nervousness make life a burden.

There is one remedy that acts directly on the kidneys and cures these troubles. Down's Kidney Pills owe their world-wide fame to the fact that they cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Follow the example of this Gettysburg citizen and you will be convinced that this is so.

Mrs. Frank Tawney, 28 Breckinridge St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "Down's Kidney Pills have been used in my family with excellent results. I publicly endorsed them two years ago and hold just as high an opinion of them at this time. A member of my family was afflicted with kidney trouble for years and probably inherited it. This person suffered a great deal from pain in his back and sides and was unable to control the kidney secretions. A cold always aggravated the complaint. When I saw Down's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at the People's Drug Store and their use effected a complete cure."

SUDDEN DEATH VISITATIONSCUT DOWN WHILE HELPING AT BUTCHERING*Takes Her Own Life—Stricken While Going After the Cows—Found Dead in Bed

MRS. ANNA POIST, wife of Philip Poist of Oxford township, near McSherrystown, fell over dead at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 21, from a stroke of apoplexy. She was aged 53 years 3 months and 2 days. Mrs. Poist was assisting Claude Keagy and family, near neighbors, to butcher on Wednesday, and had just completed the day's work and was ready to return to her home when she was stricken while walking out the yard. She fell to the ground, expiring instantly. The deceased was a daughter of the late Sebastian Weaver of McSherrystown, and was married 29 years ago to Philip Poist, of Conewago township, who survives her, with seven sons and three daughters. The sons are: Charles Poist, of Hanover, Joseph, Frank, Leo, Mark, Stanley and Plus; at home; the daughters are Misses Mary and Anna, who reside at home, and Miss Sue Poist of McSherrystown. She is also survived by two sisters, Mrs. James Staub of Berlin Junction, and Mrs. Augustus Small of McSherrystown, and five brothers, John Weaver of Conewago township, Frank, Sebastian and Lewis Weaver of McSherrystown, and Charles Weaver of Albany, N.Y. Funeral took place Saturday, Dec. 24, at St. Mary's Catholic church, McSherrystown, where a solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. L. Aug. Reutter, interment in Conewago Cemetery.

MRS. CALIFORNIA A. WEAVER, aged 50 years, wife of John Weaver, optician and engraver, of Hagerstown, committed suicide last Wednesday morning at her home, by hanging herself with a rope made out of a blanket.

Justice Hartle, acting coroner, who went to the house and inquired into the facts, with Lieutenant Fridinger, decided an inquest was unnecessary.

A young daughter of Mrs. Weaver found the body hanging in the hallway on the first floor about 8 o'clock. Her body was still warm. It is thought she hanged herself soon after she arose from her bed.

Mrs. Weaver tied one end of the blanket rope to the banisters and at the other end she made a loop through which she slipped her head. It is thought she stood on a box or trunk, adjusted the noose and then stepped off.

Her daughter cut the body down, using a pair of shears. She summoned her father, who used every means to revive his wife. He then went to police headquarters, accompanied by a friend, and reported the matter. Justice Hartle went to the house at once. He had Dr. E. A. Wareham summoned. The physician used every known method to revive the woman but was unsuccessful.

Mrs. Weaver, it is reported, on several previous occasions attempted to take her life. She had been closely watched. Mental derangement as result of illness is supposed to have been the cause of the act.

She was the youngest daughter of the late Burgess and Mrs. Edward Aughinbaugh of Chambersburg, and was born and raised there. Her husband is a native of Gettysburg and after their marriage he conducted a jewelry store in this place and the family lived in Chambersburg, Norfolk, Va., and Hagerstown, Md. Funeral was on Friday at Chambersburg. Surviving are her husband and three daughters, Misses Marie, Corinne and Leonilde. A brother and sister survive, James A. and Miss Mollie Aughinbaugh of Chambersburg.

GABRIEL MYERS, a native, and for many years a resident of Adams Co., and a well-known citizen of Tippecanoe County, Ind., was found dead in a field about forty rods from his home, two miles north of Petit, Ind., at about 5 o'clock Dec. 14. Mr. Myers left the house shortly after 4 o'clock to bring the cow. He was gone longer than usual and his wife called to him, but he did not respond. She then sent her son Calvin to look for him and he found him lifeless. Death is supposed to have resulted from heart failure. In the fall he received a slight abrasion over the left eye. Mr. Myers was born in Adams county, Oct. 25, 1825, and was the last of a family of five sisters and one brother, of the northern part of county. They were Geo. Myers, Mrs. Mary Chambers, Mrs. Margaret Bream, Mrs. Harriet Bream, Mrs. Susan Dull, and Mrs. Lizzie Parker. He went to Indiana in 1866 and was a well to do farmer. Mr. Myers was a member of the United Brethren Church. He was married sixty-one years ago to Miss Mary Slaybaugh of near Center Mills, who with the following children survive: John H. Myers and Mrs. Levi Shively of Lafayette, William E. Myers of Monitor, Mrs. J. A. Sensenbaugh, Calvin A. and G. E. Myers, all of Tippecanoe county, Ind. The funeral services were conducted at Zion United Brethren church Saturday morning, Dec. 17, at 10:30 o'clock.

MISS ESTER REBECCA HEINARD, an aged maiden lady who resided with her sister, Mrs. S. Retura Hersh, in Hampton, was found dead in bed by her sister at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning, Dec. 20, the cause of her death being pronounced heart failure. The lady had been in her usual health when she retired Monday evening, but when her sister went to her room at time above stated, found her dead. Miss Heinard, who was aged 73 years, was a daughter of the late Samuel and Anna Chronister Heinard. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Hersh, and one brother, Henry Heinard, both of Hampton. The funeral took place from her late home last Saturday morning, services being held in the Reformed church, and interment made in Hampton Union cemetery.

MRS. MICHAEL KOPP who lived with her daughter, Mrs. Emily Miller, at Wlotz, died December 16, at the home of her son, Jacob, near Biglerville, from a stroke of paralysis. She was about 55 years old and for the past seven years had been almost helpless from a paralytic stroke. She was so weak that two weeks ago, when she made the trip to Biglerville she could not sit in the car seat and rode in the express car. Surviving are her husband and four children: Jacob of Biglerville, Mrs. Miller of Wlotz, Mrs. Tillman Young and a young son who is at home. Funeral on Sunday, December 18, Rev. Fred Geesey of Spring Grove officiating. Further services and interment followed at St. Peter's Lutheran Church at Lesches.

MRS. EMMA MANN, wife of Ernest Mann, died on Monday December 19, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Slaugenhaupt, at Littlestown, after a two months' illness. She was aged about 35 years. The deceased was married to Ernest Mann, son of Rev. Dr. Mann, formerly of Littlestown, and resided at Jersey City, N.J. Besides her husband and parents, she is survived by an infant son, Louis Albert, two months old. Three brothers also survive, Prof. Howard Slaugenhaupt of the faculty of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster; Norman of Trenton, N.J., and Raymond of Lancaster. Funeral was on Thursday, Dec. 22, services by Rev. Dr. Butz, of Redeemer's Reformed church officiating. Interment in Mt. Carmel cemetery, Littlestown.

MRS. MARY ELLEN LEAS, wife of Wm. A. Leas, died last Thursday morning at her home near Bermudian, of typhoid pneumonia, aged 53 years, 1 month and 72 days. She is survived by her husband, a daughter Mrs. Elsie May, of Reading, one son Paul at home, also by two brothers, Wm. Lenhart of Illinois, J. Harry Lenhart of New York City. The funeral was Sunday morning with services at the Bermudian Reformed church. Rev. Wm. H. Miller officiating.

JAMES SLAGLE, proprietor of hotel at Emmitsburg, Md., died Monday, Dec. 19, from a complication of diseases. He was aged about 35 years. The deceased is survived by his wife, who was the widow of the late Lewis Mondorf, and one stepdaughter. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Slagle, of Emmitsburg, and three brothers, Robert Slagle of New York, John of Baltimore, and Joseph of McSherrystown.

GOTTLIEB FACKLER.—Dr. L. H. Fackler of York, formerly of East Berlin, received a telegram announcing the death of his uncle, Gottlieb Fackler, at Red Land, California. He was in his 85th year and was well known about East Berlin. Last summer he spent two months as the guest of Dr. Fackler and family and enjoyed his visit particularly. Sixty years ago he resided in York. At the time of his visit he was accompanied by his daughters, the Misses Mary and Ella Fackler, who, with a son at Cincinnati survive.

MRS. DANIEL K. TRIMMER, a former resident of York, died Friday, Dec. 16, in Washington, D.C. Death was caused by paralysis, she having been stricken about two months ago, during which time she was confined to bed. Mrs. Trimmer was aged 43 years and is survived by her husband and five children. She was a native of Norfolk, Va., to which place her body was taken last Sunday for interment. Mr. Trimmer was for years one of York county's prominent and successful lawyers and real estate agents, and resided at York and was well known in this county and moved to Washington, where he is largely interested in real estate.

GEORGE ANDREW WOODING, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Wooding of McSherrystown, died at 4 a.m. last Thursday of pneumonia, aged 1 month and 12 days. Funeral services at the house and interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

ARNER D. MARKS died at the home of his sister, Mrs. H. L. Bream in Cashtown, on December 14, aged 68 years and 11 months. The funeral was held on Friday following with interment at Flohr's church. Arner Marks was well known throughout the county. For years he was a traying salesman and then conducted a dry goods store in the Square in this place for a number of years, finally selling his place to G. W. Weaver & Son. He was an earnest Democrat all his life. He is survived by two sisters, Mrs. H. L. Bream of Cashtown and Dr. Ella Marks of Baltimore.

EX-SENATOR CHARLES E. QUAIL, of Auburn, Schuylkill County, fell dead in the Auditor General's Department at Harrisburg last week. He was a physician and a veteran of the Civil War, having participated in the Gettysburg Campaign and was a member of the Battlefield Commission erecting the Pennsylvania Memorial dedicated last September.

RICHARD DAVIS about two weeks ago met with a serious accident. He was an employ of the Sheaffer grain warehouse at Greason, Cumberland Co. He was going to the engine room to stop the engine, in order to remove a belt, and in passing another belt his glove was caught, and his arm drawn into it. His arm was so badly injured that it became necessary to amputate it, which was done at Harrisburg hospital. Blood poisoning set in and for some time Mr. Davis was very ill. He suffered a relapse and last Friday passed away, gangrene being given as the cause of his death.

He is survived by his aged father J. M. Davis, his wife and three children, Marshall, May and Richard, one brother and two sisters, John, of Toland, Mrs. Slaybaugh, Greason and Mrs. Yingst, of near Asper's this county.

ROBERT NEWTON ELLIOTT, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Elliott, of York, died Thursday evening, Dec. 21, aged 2 months and 29 days. Buried Saturday morning at 10:30 at York.

When Sarah Went to School.

When Miss Elsie Singmaster's second book "When Sarah Went to School" was received from the publishers Houghton Mifflin Company of Boston several weeks ago and in acknowledging the receipt of book. A more extended review was promised.

"When Sarah Went to School" is a continuation of Miss Singmaster's first book "When Sarah Saved the Day" and is the story of the life of the little Pennsylvania German girl Sarah Weuner for several years beyond the point where the first book took her. It seemed to us that the second book is much stronger than the first. The Pennsylvania German atmosphere throughout is home made and possesses a naive charm that is most fascinating. There is no idiom to worry the reader only many instances of those typical expressions as illustrated in Sarah's dread of going away to school when she says she is "too dumb, nobody can't teach me nothing." The little Pennsylvania German lass is made the victim of joker by the girls at the Normal to which Sarah goes and she begins her school life by losing her temper and throwing pitcher of water over the transom of her room upon a teacher thinking it was upon the girls who had been teasing her. The many difficulties she encounters and overcomes is most interestingly told. She begins to make good with her instructors and then with the other scholars and saves the day for her class in a thrilling way. Her aptitude for books is thoughtlessly imposed upon by her teachers and at the State Board examination she takes all the examinations for several classes because no one tells her what to do or what not to do and her work is done so well that she wins special recognition. The story from beginning to end is mellowed and softened to the Queen's taste with the Pennsylvania German, the atmosphere is harmonious and the book has an intensely homely charm characteristic of the subject. Miss Singmaster knows the heart and soul of the people she puts in her books and deserves great credit for the faithful preservation she is giving them in story. When the book is finished it is with a keen appetite to know more of Sarah and the hope is entertained that there will be other volumes to bring to maturity the life of this fascinating Pennsylvania German lass, Sarah Wenner.

That Washington Railroad.

The Baltimore American of recent date says that railroad men see in the construction of the Washington, Westminster and Gettysburg railway a freight cut off for the Pennsylvania, thus relieving the Baltimore tunnels of their congestion. The proposed road would connect with the Frederick division of the Pennsylvania Railroad by which a route would be open to York and thence to Philadelphia, and New York, as well as to Harrisburg and Western points.

Such a line it is contended would meet all the requirements of the freight cut off around Baltimore, which the Pennsylvania Railroad planned six years ago but was blocked by a denial of suburbs of Baltimore. The proposed road would meet all demands of the Pennsylvania for its constantly increasing Southern traffic and relieve the Baltimore tunnels, taxed now to their utmost. It is said that the volume and value of the traffic through the tunnels exceed those of any tunnels in the world.

It is only within the past few weeks that life has been infused into the Washington, Westminster and Gettysburg Railroad. A promise has been made by capitalists that with the grading of five miles of the proposed road funds will be forthcoming for its completion. The Columbia Construction Company, of Washington, of which E. Southard Parker is president, now has the enterprise in charge. It is claimed that the local traffic of the road will be sufficient for its support. It would only be necessary for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company to guarantee interest on the bonds to insure the building of the road.

This point of view does not make hopeful of the road reaching Gettysburg.

Student Elected Pastor.

Rev. Irvin Lau, a student of the Seminary here, has been unanimously elected pastor of St. John's Lutheran Charge, consisting of St. John's, St. Luke's and Grace congregations in the vicinity of Littlestown. It is understood that Mr. Lau will accept the call extended him and supply the congregations until his ordination next Spring, when he will take active charge of the work. Mr. Lau is a native of East Berlin, and a nephew of Rev. Dr. D. B. Lau, of Hanover, who is pastor of the West Manheim Lutheran charge.

LICENSE NOTICE.

In the Court of Quarter Sessions of Adams County: It is ordered that all applications for license for the sale of wines, spirits, malt or brewed liquors, wholesale or retail, for the year 1911, will be heard on FRIDAY, the 13th day of JANUARY, 1911, at 10:30 a.m., at which time all persons applying or making objections to applications will be heard by evidence, deposition, or otherwise or at any time with the Judges personally upon the subject, by letter or any other private way.

The petition verified by affidavit of applicant, shall be in conformity with the requirements of the Acts of Assembly. Judgment bond shall be executed in the penal sum of $2,000, with no less than two reputable freeholders of the county where the liquor is to be sold, as sureties, each of whom shall be a bona-fide owner of real estate in the said county, worth over and all incumbrances, the sum of $2,000, or other legal security to be given. Bond conditioned for the faithful observance of all the laws relating to the selling or furnishing of liquors, and to pay all damages which shall be recovered against the licensee, and all costs, fines and penalties which may be imposed on him under any indictment for violating said laws, and the sureties may be required to appear in Court to justify upon oath.

The Court shall in all cases refuse the application whenever in the opinion of the Court, having due regard to the number and character of the petitioners for and against such applications, such license is not necessary for the accommodation of the public and entertainment of strangers and travelers, or to whom such license should be granted.

Petitions may be filed with the Clerk of the Courts not later than SATURDAY, the 17th day of DECEMBER, 1910. Objections and remonstrances to be filed not later than Tuesday, the 3rd day of JANUARY, 1911.

Upon sufficient cause being shown or proof being made to the Court that the party holding a license has violated any law of the Commonwealth relating to the sale of liquors the Court shall, upon notice being given to the person licensed, revoke the license.

shoes making as much noise as the modern fire engine.

"It is Jan Vanderstreet's," some one screamed. "The place is doomed."

On hearing these words Dirk ran faster than before and outstripped the crowd. When he reached the house he found the family coming out, laden with plunder, and heard Mistress Vanderstreet exclaim: "No more must we go back! It is not safe, and it is better to lose one's goods than one's life!"

"But my pipes! My precious pipes!" cried old Jan, all his phlegmatic restfulness gone. "I must get them!"

His wife seized him firmly by the arm.

"That you shall not do. Everything is afire. I will not let you risk your life for a set of worthless pipes."

"Worthless pipes!" thundered Jan. "How dare you speak so? They are a part of my life. I have been collecting them all my life long until now more than a hundred hang in my rack. And must I lose them all because of your hard headedness? Let me go, I say; let me go!"

He struggled wildly in her grasp, but it was in vain. Mistress Vanderstreet was a very strong and a nobly determined woman and held him in so firm a grip he could do naught but writh and groan.

Dirk Van Pelt had a great emotion and reached a great determination with an almost American swiftness. He knew that the rafters of the blazing house would fall in soon—might tumble in crimson ruin at any moment. But not in vain did he have in his veins the blood of the wonderful race that cut the dikes and drowned their beloved land rather than yield it to the invaders.

Jan Vanderstreet took with him his wonderful collection of pipes, famed throughout all Gelderland and even beyond that beautiful district. He also took with him what he valued almost as much as his pipes—his very buxom and still blooming wife, his blooming daughter, Ankie, and his blooming orphaned niece, Johanna de Koop.

The only member of the party of Holland adventurers who was not truly substantial, according to sound Dutch standards, was Dirk Van Pelt. Myneheen Vanderstreet had frowned on his admission as a member of the solemn exodus. But Dirk had cunningly used such un-Hollandlike haste in putting his entire patrimony of $1,000 into the speculation that he had an interest in it before the more deliberate Ankie knew it.

Jan Vanderstreet did not like this at all. The trouble was that Dirk was altogether too fond of Ankie. If the broad shouldered, sturdy, bandsome youth had only exhibited enough sense to be fond of some one not in the Vanderstreet family the mynheer might have felt quite glad to have him in the party, for Dirk was not at all disagreeable to anybody, with his kind smile and his readiness to help every one who needed it.

Myneheen Vanderstreet determined to keep close watch during the voyage. But what could one do on shipboard? Could a worthy Dutchman of five and sixty be expected to go on guard over his daughter when all the men folks were smoking their pipes on deck, telling tales of the past and speculating about the future? Truly not.

The chaperonage of Ankie was therefore left to her mother. But even on shipboard that industrious Dutch housewife could not be idle, and when one has a huge stocking and a ball of yarn, also a set of knitting needles, in hand it is not always convenient to follow a will-o'-the-wisp of a girl.

Besides, Johanna was always with her cousin, and lovemaking when a third person is present is not so easy to carry on. At least so argued Mistress Vanderstreet, forgetting that there is a language of the eye which expresses as clearly as speech what is in one's heart and that a pressure of the hand may convey an assurance of love just as plainly as if one said "I love you."

Although Dirk had little opportunity of telling Ankie of his love by word of mouth, that he was her devoted slave and wished for no greater happiness than to call her his wife, Ankie knew what was in his heart, because she returned his love.

By the end of the voyage Dirk knew that her heart was in his keeping, and he determined to wrest from the soul of the prairie a living that would entitle him to old Vanderstreet's respect.

Busy days followed the arrival of the Hollanders in the little Iowa settlement. Ground was broken, teams purchased, grain sowed and houses erected.

The Vanderstreet residence was the most pretentious in the place, but the cottage built by Dirk Van Pelt was as pretty a little Dutch home as any romantic girl would wish.

Vines were planted and soon grew about the porch, a bed of tulips flaunted gayly colored blossoms in the front yard, and a kitchen garden flourished in the rear.

Things soon prospered with Dirk and after six months of anxious waiting he ventured to call on Jan Vanderstreet to ask for the hand of his daughter. The mynheer, with unusual promptness, immediately gave Dirk to understand that he wished to hear more of the matter and very politely intimated that the doors of the Vanderstreet residence would be closed thenceforth to him.

Disappointed, but not discouraged, Dirk went slowly home, vowing to himself with genuine Holland determination that he would never give up the girl he loved.

His resolution was strengthened by the sight of Ankie standing at the window holding out a letter, which she dropped and he picked up.

The letter told him that she would be his, with or without her father's blessing, and bade him have patience.

Dirk continued to work his little place industriously, hoping to hear from Ankie. But three weeks elapsed before he had an opportunity of talking with her. He left her presence, feeling much encouraged, and fell asleep that night more hopeful. He was awakened from sweet dreams of his love by the cry of fire.

Throwing on his clothes, he rushed from the house. The town was already aroused, and down the streets the people came running in all stages of dress, the clatter of their wooden shoes making as much noise as the modern fire engine.

"It is Jan Vanderstreet's," some one screamed. "The place is doomed."

On hearing these words Dirk ran faster than before and outstripped the crowd. When he reached the house he found the family coming out, laden with plunder, and heard Mistress Vanderstreet exclaim: "No more must we go back! It is not safe, and it is better to lose one's goods than one's life!"

Farmers Should Advertise.

J. W. Lighty, a resident of East Berlin, a farmer and speaker at the Farmers' Institutes held throughout the State believes that it is a wise move on the part of the farmer to advertise his products after he has brought them to the highest standard possible and gave his experience with dairy products, which are credited with being among the best sold in the state.

He said that before he took to farming he kept a little grocery, and there recorded everything that was bought and sold very accurately. When he went on the farm he said he did not think it was necessary to keep such an accurate record of things, but in a year's time he said he was losing money.

"So one day I went into my room," he said, "and I thought over the matter very carefully. I knew there was something wrong some place. It came to mind that I kept an accurate record of things at the store and I decided to apply the same methods on my farm. It worked out very nicely and in another year I found that I was making money instead of losing it."

"Then I went into the advertising game; had business cards and circulars printed. On my circular I reprinted the statements of some of the state officials, in which they told in what bad conditions the various dairies were, and then after that I told in what good condition my dairy was kept. Then I had a number of prominent men visit my farm and gave me testimonials."

"With my cards and circulars I went out to sell my butter to the highest class of people. If I did not sell them any the first time I handed them a card and circular. The next time I called I usually sold some butter."

Mr. Lighty claims he's selling all the butter he can make and is getting a much higher price than any other farmer in that section. He will be one of the speakers at the farmers' institute, to be held this week in York Springs, Dec. 28th and 30th.

Plans to Kill Lincoln Highway.

The Lincoln Highway Memorial from Washington to Gettysburg, needs the active and strenuous efforts of its friends to prevent it being killed by Congressional action. A two million dollar monument in Washington is the plan proposed by which to kill the far superior idea of a highway. Last week Senator Root made a favorable report from the Library Committee on the Cullom bill to create a Lincoln memorial commission to procure and determine upon a plan for a monument or memorial to Abraham Lincoln in Washington.

The bill authorized the proposed commission to obtain designs and provides for the erection of a memorial costing not over $2,000,000.

Eight years ago Congress enacted a law creating a commission of five to secure plans and designs for a monument to Lincoln, and $25,000 was appropriated for the preliminary work. The commission consisted of Senator Wetmore, chairman of the Senate Library Committee; the chairman of the House Library Committee, the Secretaries of State and War, former Senator George G. Vest and ex-Representative James D. Richardson of Tennessee, then Democratic minority leader in the House. Whether this commission ever did anything is not disclosed by the records of Congress. It made no report and the question is raised whether a new commission should be created while the "old" commission may be still in official existence, the law that created it not having been repealed. The old commission was created under a law which grew out of a bill introduced by Senator Cullom, just as the proposed new commission, in favor of which report was made to the Senate, is to be the result of a bill offered by Mr. Cullom.

The plan now is to have a commission, to be composed of President Taft, Senators Wetmore and Mowry, Representatives McCall and Champ Clark, five members, to determine upon and procure a location, plan and design for the memorial to be erected in Washington. The commission is authorized to employ the services of artists, sculptors and architects and avail itself of the services of the new Commission of Fine Arts created last May.

The memorial is to be built under the direction of the Secretary of War at cost of $2,000,000. To meet the preliminary expenses the bill provides for an immediate appropriation of $100,000, the commission to submit annually to Congress an estimate of the money needed to carry on its work.

When the former commission was created it was the plan to have the Lincoln memorial erected in the lowlands of the old Naval Observatory, in accordance with the plans of the Park Commission. Mr. Cannon of Illinois, then a member of the House, but not yet chosen Speaker, declared in debate at the time that he favored a monument to Lincoln, but would protest against locating it down in the "flats." He thought such a monument should be placed where everybody visiting the city would be able to view it as easily as the Washington Monument.

Charged With Horse Stealing

Joshua Patterson, formerly of near Waynesboro, is in jail in this county on the charge of stealing a horse belonging to Adam Bloom, near Fountaindale, which was tied at the home of Mr. Bloom's son, along the Waynesboro pike, near the old toll gate. Patterson was arrested by constable Reese of Hamiltonian township. He moved from Franklin county to Adams during this year. Several months ago he was arrested in Waynesboro for entering stores and annoying clerks and frightening customers, and was released on his promise to leave the community. After hearing before Justice last week in Fairfield, Patterson was recommitted to the jail.

Exciting Runaways

On Tuesday afternoon of last week, after going to press the town was excited over a runaway. The horse of Mrs. Unger J. Snyder, was tied at the People's Cash Store, and skipping its bridle started at a mad pace down

Carlisle street. A shifting engine was crossing the street before the horse reached the tracks and the animal went dashing into the engine. It was thrown down, and struggling to its feet dashed up street and out Chambersburg street and was caught by Hugh McIlhenny, at foot of Seminary hill. The horse had a few slight cuts, not serious and shafts of buggy were broken. A number of narrow escapes were made by citizens in the wild dash of horse.

Mrs. J. Emory Bair's two horse team and sleigh the same Tuesday evening ran away. The sleigh overturned in coming out ally in rear of Hotel Gettysburg. The driver, John Shue, was thrown out but not seriously hurt. The horses ran down York street and the York pike some distance before caught.

50th Anniversary Work.

The Pennsylvania State Commission on the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Battle had a meeting in Philadelphia last week and considered communications received from every state and suggestions offered as to the nature of the celebration and the assistance to be given. Another meeting has been fixed for Friday, Dec 30.

A Large Contract.

When L. M. Buehler the enterprising druggist, first offered a 50 cent package of Dr. Howard's specific for the cure of constipation and dyspepsia at half price, and guaranteed to return the money if it did not cure, he thought it probable from his experience with other medicines for these diseases that he would have a good many packages returned.

L. M. Buehler wants every person in Gettysburg who has constipation, dyspepsia, headaches, or liver trouble to come to his store or send L. M. Buehler 25 cents by mail and get 60 doses of the best medicine ever made at half the regular price, with his personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not cure.

To those suffering with dizziness, headache, poor digestion, constipation and straining, Dr. Howard's specific offers quick relief. It is an invaluable boon to all who feel uncomfortable after eating, and is today the popular dinner pill in all the large cities.

Hanover's Sensation

The dead body of an infant child found on Monday morning of last week, by H. D. Sheppard, in his home, may prove a case of infanticide.

The party concerned, Miss Minnie Shue, aged 18 years, a domestic whose home is in Penn township, York Co., has been employed in the Sheppard family since last September.

The case came to light Monday morning when the body of a perfectly formed male child weighing 12 pounds was found in a shoe box between the partition in a clothes closet in the girl's room.

On Saturday evening the girl had been on the streets doing Christmas shopping. On Sunday morning Mrs. Sheppard noticed that the girl was ill, and told her to remain abed. Dr. Charles Wagner was summoned, who, upon investigation, discovered that the girl was either in a delicate condition or had become a mother, which it is alleged, she denied.

Without disclosing the secret Miss Shue was taken to the home of her aunt, Mrs. George Warehime, near Kremler's school house, on Sunday evening, where she was living before coming to Hanover.

Mr. Sheppard made a thorough search of the room occupied by the girl, on Monday, and was horrified at the ghastly result of his investigations. He notified Justice of the Peace L. D. Sell, who visited the Sheppard home and then informed Coroner Dehuff at York, who came to Hanover at 3 p. m. Monday and accompanied by Justice Sell, viewed the dead body and ordered an inquest.

The Coroner, accompanied by Dr. Charles H. Smith of York, conducted the inquest. After the jury had viewed the body, Dr. Smith made an autopsy. Though no definite statement was made, it is rumored that evidences point to the fact that the child was born alive.

The coroner then adjourned the inquest until a future date, when witness will be subpoenaed and testimony taken.

Harrisburg Telegraph Almanac.

The 1911 edition of the Harrisburg Telegraph Almanac and Central Pennsylvania Year Book, the "elbow-book" which won such favor when it appeared for the first time last year, will be issued about the end of this week. The almanac is larger than before, and it goes without saying that it is more complete and more convenient. It has more features and is better in every way.

The almanac has been compiled after a study of Harrisburg and its environs and of the counties in which the Telegraph is the great home newspaper. The men who edited it found out what the people wanted to know about in a hurry, in what statistics they were interested and what information they desired to keep at their elbows. The data was secured from original and authoritative sources, the value of the publication being so generally recognized that men in possession of facts went to considerable pains to make it available for the use of the almanac, efforts which have the thanks not only of the Telegraph, but by thousands of readers. Information not obtainable except after hours of tedious search or by vigorous use of telephones is presented in terse, accurate form in the almanac. It is the thing to have right at your elbow.

The almanac is larger than ever, its pages numbering 128 and the reading matter is so arranged that handy reference is facilitated. The features include those which won recognition last year as valuable and others which were added in response to suggestions from people all over this section of the State.

What every one wants to know in a hurry at some time or another about Harrisburg is there. A chronology of practically all of the year is presented, while governmental matters are given much space. The business, social and religious life of the people of Harrisburg is given much space, and athletics, politics and industries are summarized so that the information can be obtained in a short space of time.

As to Adams county, it gives a list of our officials, farmers' institutes, some model orchards of the county as furnished by Prof. H. A.
